Cross Table

You will be like a kid in a candy store with fresh collection of occasional tables. Available in three sizes, dozens of colours, and tops made of oak or walnut, you can mix and match and have fun combining them with your décor. The base of the Cross Table, as the name suggests, is made from two, precisely cut sheets of aluminium that fit together like a puzzle, making them light, but also very sturdy.

Tube Table

With its robust form and chubby legs, this little table has been conceived for public spaces and has many levels of personality. Its incredibly thin top (5mm) is supported by three legs that end in turned wooden feet, which add a contrasting, natural touch to the aluminium body. You can also play with the colours of the aluminium and types of wood – iroko in the exterior version and beech or oak for the interior – or even match the table top with a wooden finish.

Sitges Table

Named after the Mediterranean resort town near Barcelona, the Sitges Table is perfect for relaxing outdoor settings. Made of light-weight aluminium with a lacquered finish, its base is formed from a singular tube that is folded to form three legs, making it very light-weight in appearance but also very sturdy.
